ABOUT PAIGE FISH:

Utah native Paige Fish's music naturally parallels the topography of her home state. Mountainous pop hooks tower from high altitudes, while cinematic country storytelling channels the vastness of lush vistas and desert plains. At the same time, the 20-year-old singer, songwriter, and guitar player evokes a myriad of emotions, leaning on lyrics often-lifted directly from her trusty handwritten diary. Proudly hailing from Springville, UT, she has resided in the same house since birth, living with her parents, twin sister, and younger sister. Even in this tiny town, music was never far out of reach. Mom served as the church choir director, and dad kept guitars around the house. They constantly played live videos of Fleetwood Mac and Chris Stapleton. Paige went from singing the "The Star-Spangled Banner" at college and minor league sporting events to participating in local theater productions and penning tunes of her own. By the age of thirteen, she had cut her first recording with the help of a professional producer neighbor. At 16-years-old, she delivered her breakthrough "26 and 24" [with Landon Boyce]. Its viral success on TikTok carried over to DSPs, generating 12 million Spotify streams and paving the way for her In Another Lifetime EP [2024]. She maintained this momentum and dropped the Wishful Thinking EP during 2025. The latter's "Baby Blondie" caught the ear of mega-producer JKash [Charlie Puth, Maroon 5, Lady Gaga] who messaged Paige and promptly signed her in partnership with Atlantic Outpost. Amassing tens of millions of streams and resonating in the hearts of a growing audience, she tells timeless stories with personal flair on her 2026 full-length debut album, Midnight Crisis [Atlantic Outpost].
